Trout Point Lodge, Nova Scotia, Canada: hotel review

Nigel Richardson visits Trout Point Lodge, a wilderness retreat on the edge of Canada's Kejimkujik National Park.

All eight rooms have local handmade furniture, including beds made of logs and twigs, and wood-burning fireplaces or stoves

By Nigel Richardson

erall rating: 8/10

Overview

This is a wilderness lodge with a difference, memorably designed and serving food not to fill your hiking boots but to tickle your palate. It is the brainchild of a couple of foodies from Louisiana. There are cookery breaks, canoeing, hiking, river swimming and a riverside sauna and hot tub.

Location 9/10

Lodge and grounds occupy 100 acres alongside a Unesco Biosphere Reserve, which is next to Kejimkujik National Park. The Tusket and Napier Rivers flow through, dark with tannin. Beeches, birches and maples are flected in their glassy waters. Light pollution is minimal, making the (organised) stargazing sensational.

Style/character 7/10

The main lodge, built in what they like to call "haute rustic" style, is apparently modelled on the Great Camps built along North America's Atlantic coast by settlers and pioneers: huge logs of eastern spruce, chiselled granite and sandstone, the effect softened by Tiffany lamps and oriental rugs.

Service 7/10

Friendly and informal, whether you're getting the inside track from the owners, Charles Leary and Vaughn Perret, or the gossip from the locally recruited staff.

Rooms 6.5/10

All eight rooms have local handmade furniture, including beds made of logs and twigs, and wood-burning fireplaces or stoves. No televisions. Some are cosy, the bigger ones a bit austere.

Food and drink 9/10

An innovatory mix of Cajun, Creole and Acadian (French Nova Scotian) dishes using local seafood, plants, mushrooms and herbs from the garden, and homemade cheeses and breads. The four-course fixed menu, which ay include oysters, trout and bread pudding, changes daily. The wine list is extensive but a bit pricey.

Value for money 6/10

It's in the middle of nowhere, so you can't just eat out, which makes the combined cost for accommodation and food pretty steep. On the other hand, the dinners are first-class and the whole experience memorable.

Doubles from £147 per night, room only. There are also cottages from £246. But always ask about offers. Breakfast and dinner cost an additional £132 for two.

ccess for guests with disabilities

Two ground-floor rooms are "semi-accessible" and there are boardwalks alongside the river.
